HORSE SHOW FIRST OF OUR OUTDOOR THRILLS

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Four events attracting wide attention are scheduled for this county in the late summer and fall: One week from tomorrow (Saturday, August 8) the annual San Mateo County Horse Show will open at Atherton; on Thursday, October 8, the fall meeting at my Tanforan track begins for a period of twenty-five days; the same day the annual San Mateo Floral Fiesta gets under way; and on the wind-up of the Tanforan session of sport Bay Meadows will swing into line.

The Horse Show "intrigues," as the old-time novelist used to say, on account of its growth into a happening of national importance. Only in recent years have the shows in the West become of more than local interest. It would be hard to find an exhibition of the kind surpassing the Atherton show in completeness of appointment, picturesque setting, quality of animals competing for prizes and whole-hearted enthusiasm aroused by the well directed efforts of Mrs. W. P. Roth and her assistants.

Thoroughbreds are not going to be overlooked and it looks as though there will be liberal entries to the breeding classes of the race horse. One critic "suggested" lately the hackney makes a better jumper than the thoroughbred, possibly because of his natural high action, and another has an idea no horse living is so beautiful as the American saddler. All that may be very true, but, as I said last week in The Record, all the breeds of the light horses have their foundation in the thoroughbred.

The Kentucky Derby winner, Flying Ebony, is being sent up from Santa Barbara to the show, as is Vain Bachelor from Los Angeles; the Australasian Tea Trader will also try for a blue ribbon on the well known tests of conformation, style, manners, quality and action. Henry P. Russell will do the judging

Among the sucklings, undoubtedly will be a number of eligibles to the Tanforan Futurity. Yearlings and broodmares from various haras will also do a bit of showing off.

DESPONDENT MAN SHOOTS HIMSELF WITH SHOT GUN

Jobless Grocery Clerk Ends Life Over Grief At Daughter's Death

George Stirling, a jobless grocery store clerk, committed suicide at the Mission Auto Court, last Saturday night about 9 o'clock. Stirling placed the barrel of a shot gun in his mouth and pulled the trigger.

The victim's body was found when a friend, Eugene Neustiel, 25, returned to their cabin which they had rented and occupied jointly since Thursday of last week.

Neustiel asserted that his friend was despondent and grieving over the tragic death of his 15 year old daughter in an auto accident, which occurred in Los Angeles six weeks previously. The young girl was killed instantly when struck down by an automobile in the southern city.

Stirling's remains were removed to the mortuary establishment of W. C. Lasswell & Co.

On Monday evening of this week the body was shipped to Los Angeles for burial.

Cavalry Provisional Platoon Will Be Seen In Action In Show Ring

Thirty-two army officers and enlisted men making up the Eleventh Cavalry Provisional Platoon of the Presidio of Monterey will be presented in a spectacular "Cossack Drill" as a feature of every performance during the San Mateo County National Horse Show, August 8 to 15, at the Menlo Circus Club in Atherton.

With upraised long, shining lances, topped by brightly colored pennants, this army platoon will charge down the tanbark ring, going through intricate drill formations and performing thrilling gymnastics on horseback.

Riding through hoops of fire, vaulting on horseback from one horse to another at a full gallop, Roman riding and other difficult accomplishments will be part of this dizzying Cossack Drill, according to the platoon's commanding officer, Captain Paul Kendall.

With this unusual and spectacular feature and the turnout of valuable horses in the hunter and jumper division, harness horses, three and five-gaited saddle horses, polo ponies and stock horses, all competing for $10,000 in prize money, the show this year is expected to be the most entertaining and best ever presented in Northern California.

Scores of showy mounts never before seen at the San Mateo County National Horse Show will compete in the tan bark ring and competition this year will be keener than ever before as the result of the large number entries received from Pacific Coast and Eastern stables.

The fifty piece silver set and tray to match, donated by Granat Bros. and raffled off on July 25 by the American Legion, Post No. 410, of Daly City, was won by Mrs. M. Wilson of 742 Moultre, and what a wonderful surprise she got. The drawing took place during our dance intermission at the Legion Hall, 474 San Diego, at 11 p. m. Considering how fine this railroad transportation is nowadays, you can't travel any cheaper. Fares lowest in history—substantial savings on round trip tickets. So why not take the train? It's safer. It's more dependable.

•

You can't beat the improved travel comfort in coaches and sleeping cars. It's a good thing movies don't have such restful seats—most folks would sure fall asleep.

•

Ever hear about the Free pick-up-and-delivery of less than carload freight? It's a great convenience to shippers and receivers alike. Western railroads pick up at the door, ship by fast freight, and deliver to consignee's door.

•

Railroad trains are running on faster schedules these days. Seems like the iron horse wants to show these new streamlined diesels that he can step out, too. Both passenger and freight schedules have been speeded up.

•

What's more, the railroads believe in "safety first." Last year not one passenger was killed in a train accident on western railroads.

•

Talk to your local railroad agent. He's full of information about traveling and shipping.

•

We are proud of railroad achievements, appreciate the public's good will and increased patronage, and pledge continued progress.

A Village Blacksmith

There are few village smithy shops today under the chestnut trees. One reason is that there aren't any more chestnut trees. Another is that the motor car is rapidly driving horses and vehicles drawn by horses out of business.

I used to think that in fifty years or more practically all the village smithies would disappear.

But lately I have learned better.

Here in a little coast town in Maine is a village blacksmith who has more work than he can do, though he has probably not shod a horse or repaired an agricultural implement in twenty years or more.

* * *

For a time after the "devil wagons" began crowding horses and horse drawn vehicles off the road, he had little to do.

Then one day he saw some ornamental grill work that had been sent to his town to be used as an adornment on a new building.

He examined it carefully, then went home and thought a little.

"There is no reason in the world why I cannot do that kind of work," he said to himself. "I will do it, by Gosh."

* * *

Today the children still "love to see his flaming forge and hear the bellows blow."

Over the anvil on which he used to fashion horse shoes he makes beautiful things of steel and iron.

Visitors seeing him at work have come in to inquire if his handiwork was on sale.

He assured them that it certainly was, and that more of the same kind of work would be in evidence as soon as there was a demand for it.

He is known today all over the state, and in many other states, whose residents have bought his work.

And if he had the advertising gift that some people have he would have a wide reputation.

But not, I am sorry to say, a great business.

For his work is artistry, and cannot be done in quantity over a single anvil.

* * *

It cannot be said of him that he is another Benvenuto Cellini. He works in iron, not in silver and gold.

But he is a master craftsman, which he never might have become had he not been forced by changing conditions to become something besides the village blacksmith.

I saw him at work the other morning on a pair of beautiful andirons.

I asked him what they cost.

"A lot of time," he said.

"Yes, but how much money?"

"Oh, not so much. But the fellow I'm making them for isn't rich so I wouldn't like to charge him too much."

And there was proof that he really had the soul of an artist.

Strange Hobby

An Australian, at Sydney, Australia, has a queer habit. He buys up barrow loads of fruit—then takes delight in selling out everything at a penny a dozen. This light-hearted philanthropist says that he has been wanting to do this sort of thing ever since he was a child. He has been the center of attraction. "I don't know why I do it, except that I feel happy," he says. "Sometimes I'm walking along and see a fruit-barrow, and before you can say 'How's your uncle?' I've bought the lot."

FAIR APPRAISEMENT PROVES LEADER RIGHT

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Oxford men are noted for their thoroughness, so when a book comes out wr tten by two men of the English university on the New Deal it means something. What a relief, too, to escape from the miasmic atmosphere of misrepresentations, twistings, lies and worse, created by the almost myriad of anti-Roosevelt newspapers in the country, to the clear a r of reasoning. The Oxfordians are no special pleaders; they are neither for nor against the President of the United States; they are unprejud ced, untrammeled investigators, bound to no party.

E. M. Hugh-Jones and E. A. Radice, the authors of the intensely interesting book, held scholarships in this country while the NRA was in force add accordingly were in an ideal position to gather facts. Their training fits them to pass judgment on results.

In the impartial survey the young men were painstaking to a high degree. They assembled the available information in a scholarly way and in many instances interviewed leaders in the NRA. For example, General Hugh Johnson, who was the administrator of the NRA, is quoted as saying:

"We hammered away, sometimes hitting the nail, sometimes the thumb."

The students from across the Atlantic decided that whereas in some respects President Roosevelt's experiment assisted the undeniable econom'c recovery of the last three years, in others recovery was retarded.

Of course President Roosevelt never claimed he could do everything right in getting the ship of state back on even keel after it had been almost hopelessly wrecked by the Republicans. You probably recall his words:

Nor do we say he did not fly out, or even fan, now and then.

He has done a grand work, however, and as we have said for many months:

"Let's keep the President four years more in the White House in order to g've him time to finish what he has begun."

* * *

Getting back to the book by the young Englshmen. Among the Roosevelt accomplishments are listed a degree of financial and social reform, restoration of price levels, creation of public works which diminished unemployment, restoration of solvency to agriculture and business, and st'mulation of organization of workers into unions.

Against all those wonderful credits are these debits: the policy of giving wholesale doles to industry was not offset by any material increase of government control over industry and thereby tended to strengthen the power of monopol'es, and, furthermore, agriculture was made unduly dependent upon the domestic market. Both points are well taken and the administration, it may be said, is working right now to cut down the power of monopolies and to open foreign markets to our agriculturists.

* * *

If Alf. Landon can't do any better in the way of attempted spell bind'ng than he did in his acceptance speech, President Roosevelt will waltz home, as they say at the track. The speech from Kansas was, unqualifiedly, the nadir in campaign addresses in the history of the nation, and we have had plenty of politicians in the past who were inept, but they are almost in the class of Demosthenes in the light of developments the other night.

* * *

Some years ago an observation was made that what we need most in this country is the art of having something to say. The wise man, I do not recall his name, asseverated:

"It is thought and not words that in the long run governs nations."

In that one essential particular, thought, the Republican candidates is woefully lacking and worse he does not have the gift of oratory to at least part'ally make up for the lack.

The famous Death Ray, designed by Prof. Harry May, inventor of the first war tank, opened at the San Diego Exposition this week. The demonstration includes the exploding of gas-filled balloons.

A passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included, which reads as follows: "Father-Mother is the name of Deity, which indicates His tender relationship to H s spiritual creation" (p. 322).

DALY CITY TANFORAN BASEBALL CLUB TROUNCES MODESTO REDS

Win By Home Team On Sunday Put Them In Three Way Tie

STATE LEAGUE STANDINGS
(Second Half)

	Won	Lost	Pct.

Modesto	4	2	667
San Mateo	4	2	667
Fresno	3	2	600
Orinda Reds	2	3	400
Santa Cruz	0	6	000

The Daly City Tanforan baseball team took a trip to Modesto last Sunday for a State League contest. The game proved very one sided, as the Modesto boys could do little with the twirling of Jimmy Stevens, local chucker. He allowed only five base hits and set down eight Modesto players by the strike out route. He walked three men in the first nning and they all scored on a drive to left center by Jones.

After that one lapse Stevens was master of the situation throughout, allowing but four scattered singles thereafter.

The Daly City boys displayed a lot of pep throughout the melee. They had on their batting togs, and slammed the pellet to all corners of the grounds.

Kicks on the decisions of the umpres were numerous, the principal one, and one which almost started a battle royal, came when Umpire Borba called a drive by Jacobson over the r'ght field fence foul, when, from the visitors dug out, it looked fair by at least two feet. The entire Daly City team charged out of the dug out to the home plate and surrounded the arbiter, but no casualties resulted.

As usual, the enterainment of the game was marred by the questionable decisions of the umpires. It would seem that better talent could be obtained in the State League.

Burke, Jacobson and Palmini prov'ded the power for Daly City, each accounting for two safe blows, Palmini driving in three runs in the first frame with a well placed two ply swat.

The attendance was only fair, but the Modesto fans make up by their vociferous protestations what they lack in numbers at the games.

By winning Sunday, Daly City created a three way t'e for first honors in the second half of the State League contest, and great interest is being stirred by the closeness of the race.

The next game will be played at San Mateo next Sunday between Daly City and San Mateo at 2:30 at the City Playground Park.

Helpers

THERE is something very heartening in the knowledge that we can all help each other, and that the worst suffering of all—that of loneliness or bereavement—need never be an actual desolation; for there is always someone ready to salve the deepest wound with the balm of sympathy, and the warm clasp of some comforting hand, the tears in some kind eyes are the surest proofs that the heart under its human aspect has the power to call the hidden soul to life.

One may always begin again who keeps his enthusiasm.

Minister's Son Invents Invisible Ear Drum

The Invisible Ear Drum invented by A. O. Leonard, a son of the late Rev. A. B. Leonard, D.D., for many years secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, for his own relief from extreme deafness and head noises, has so greatly improved his hearing that he can join in any ordinary conversation, go to the theatre and hear without difficulty. Inexpensive and has proved a blessing to many people. Write for booklet to A. O. Leonard, Inc., Suite 204, 70 Fifth avenue, New York city. Advt.

He didn't want to walk all day, and he did want to see what the other papers had to say of last night's events in the Cocoanut Bar. At Fifth avenue, therefore, he turned into the public library. The reports were much alike—"Night club proprietor killed resisting arrest" and "The indictment against Jay Rogers, now held for the Kelly murder, probably will be dismissed today." Barry sat, almost alone, in the "newspaper room," turning the case over in his mind. Then he asked for old files of one of the tabloids.

He was nearly an hour finding an account of the Winslow wedding. Without any definite knowledge of the date, it was a bit like looking for the proverbial needle in a haystack. Barry's curiosity was rewarded, at last, when he stumbled upon a pictorial front page headed, "Lawyer Weds Convict's Widow." The ceremony had taken place at St. Stephen's. There were pictures of the church and of the convict—"George Selby (inset) and Love Nest Where He Took His Bride." The smudgy little "inset" might have been a portrait of Nicholas Murray Butler or Jack Dempsey, and the house might have been any house, anywhere. There was an obviously faked photograph of a holdup, and an obviously genuine one of "Mr. and Mrs. Winslow Leaving St. Stephen's." "Gosh," Barry reflected: "no wonder Mrs. Winslow had a nervous breakdown!"

The story, on the second page, was in the best tabloid tradition. "Five years ago," it began, "Peter Winslow, obscure young attorney, secured the acquittal of George Selby, charged with participating in the robbery of a candy store in the Bronx. Yesterday, Peter Winslow, rich and famous criminal lawyer, and George Selby's widow were the principal figures in what was to have been a secret ceremony at St. Stephen's."

The present Mrs. Winslow had run away with George Selby while he was a cadet in a military school. They had come to New York, rented the "love nest," and been "blissfully happy" until Selby ran out of money, and was compelled to take his wife to a boarding house. He had been arrested there, for the candy store robbery, in April, 1921. Peter Winslow had got him off, but, the following June, he was caught in another robbery in Philadelphia, and sentenced to a long term in the State Penitentiary. With two other convicts, "Lefty" Miller and "Mugs" Scanlan, he had escaped in October, 1923. Penniless, the men "staged a hold-up that same night in Fairmount Park. The victim called for help, and Selby killed him. Scanlan was shot dead by a police officer, and Selby, attempting to get away, jumped into the river, and was drowned. His body was found two weeks later, entangled in an anchor chain."

Winslow had given Mrs. Selby work in his office, and "three years after Selby's death, love culminated in the ceremony at St. Stephen's."

That explained a good deal, Barry thought, remembering the soft, round, pink little woman with worried eyes. It explained Peter's protective attitude. It might explain his quick interest in the Rogers case, in which, Barry had told Winslow, Peggy had been "putting up such a game fight to make a man of her husband."

'That sort of thing always gets me," Peter had observed. "A woman tied up to some man who's not worthy of her, and in love with him."

Peter's "Julie" had been in love with her first husband, then. And he with her, evidently, to judge by what the tabloids said of their happiness. "Must have been something good in that chap," Barry reasoned. "Probably realized what his wife was trying to do for him. We're a curious mixture."

He was still brooding over curious mixtures, and other things, when a clock struck somewhere, and reminded him that, by now, there might be a message as to young Ridder's release awaiting him at his hotel.

There wasn't.

All Thursday afternoon Barry sat in his room and, at five o'clock, he called Peter's secretary. "Nothing definite yet," she informed him. "The District Attorney's making the motion all right, but it'll be tomorrow now before anything comes of it."

Against his better judgment, then, Barry phoned Harwood. "Don't worry," the city editor said. "Have you seen tonight's Globe? Whole first page one loud yell for this kid's release. They'll be so glad to get him off their hands—"

In spite of his friendliness, Barry noticed that Ernie didn't say, "Come on down; we've something else for you." Nor even, "Of course, we'll expect you to cover Rogers getting out of jail." Why should he? "The big beat" was Harwood's "beat," not Barry's and, anyway, the old man would be at his desk the day after tomorrow. Harwood did say that, at last, "You'd better see him. I'll phone you when. Probably not before Monday. He'll be pretty busy for a day or two. Of course, you'll be around for your salary on Saturday. Might look me up then."

He was still on the pay roll, at least. That was important, what with overdrafts and hotel bills, and such things. Sober reflection, backed by experience, had persuaded Barry that he couldn't get much on his wardrobe. The studs and cuff-links were rather cheap stuff. He had sold an overcoat once—in this very town—for three dollars.

Saturday's money would just square the bank account. As for the hotel bill—"Well, I'll give them my clothes," Barry decided, "and I'll have something left in my jeans when I move out of here."

He phoned Peggy again, and then dined frugally and went back to his room. Step by step, he went over its details, seeing everything in the new light cast by the events of the past few hours. At midnight, for the fifth or sixth time, he re-read the story in the Globe. "Well, that's that," he said aloud, tossing the paper into the wastebasket and winding his silver wristwatch. "Morano's dead, young Ridder'll be free tomorrow, old Ridder'll be home Saturday, and that's that. Wonder where I'll be a week from now."

It didn't matter much. "Nothing matters much," he told himself again, dwelling on Pat's phrase, "Not without Pat, it doesn't. She's a grand girl. Out of my class, though. A week from now, she'll be playing tennis and going over to dinner at the Ridders. Wonder if Peg'll be there. Wonder what's going to happen to those two young people?"

In Friday morning's paper, under "Personal Intelligence," he found a mention of the Winslows. "Mr. and Mrs. Peter Winslow are sailing on the Aquitania next Wednesday," the item read, "for an extended tour of the Continent." That was that, too. Barry's drama was ending with all its principal characters disposed of, as well-made drama should end.

Winslow's secretary called him just before noon. "Mr. Winslow wants me to tell you that Rogers will be free in an hour or two."

"How's Mrs. Winslow?"

"Much better. Mr. Winslow's still with her, though."

"And the Hambidges?"

"No; they went back to Southampton last night."

Once more, that was that, Barry thought, getting his hat and making tracks for the subway. He reached the Tombs well in advance of official orders for the release of "Jay Rogers."

"Maybe I Was," Ridder Admitted.

It was nearly five o'clock, indeed, when "Jay Rogers" appeared, looking very white and haggard, and the last train had left for Southampton. "You can talk to Peggy on the phone," Barry told him, "and then you'd better have dinner with me, and a good night's rest at my hotel. The Bremen gets in very early, and you'll want to be on the dock."

Jack looked at him quizzically.

"Will I."

"Won't you?"

"I suppose so. I'd like to see my mother."

"I'd like to see her myself," Barry said. "She's been swell to you, all right."

"Yes."

At dinner, Jack declared, "I'll take that job on the paper now, if my father'll give it to me."

"Why not?"

"You started me thinking. I can see the old man's viewpoint. He's got to be decent to Peggy, though. It's both of us, or neither. . . . What's going to happen to you?"

"Search me!"

"Look here," Jack blurted. "I'm Ridder now. Who needs to know that I was ever Jay Rogers? I've been at Southampton all the time, writing letters to my mother, and everything. You've been Barry Gilbert, working on the Globe, and likely to go on working there. What's the matter with that?"

"Willetts is the matter with it," Barry answered—"Willetts, and Evans, and Winslow, and all the camera-clickers on the newspapers. There've been several pictures of you already. I can't understand why you weren't identified long ago."

"Maybe I was," Ridder admitted. "Your old college chums don't exactly run after you while you're in jail. They don't get to be college chums until you're in Who's Who."

"Anyway," Barry continued, "your scheme's out. I want to come clean. Don't ask me why. I was going to run away a week ago, and I couldn't make it. 'Gentlemen don't do that,' I said. I've got a new picture of myself as a gentleman."

"That's what does the trick, I guess," Jack speculated. "Most of us spend our lives trying to live up to the portraits of ourselves that hang over our mental mantel-pieces. Yours was of a reckless, devil-may-care young vagabond. Then you moved into a house, and company, where that picture didn't fit. You hung up a new one, and you've got to live up to that now. It was the same way with me. The picture of myself I liked was of an irresponsible, slightly dissipated young genius. The family portraits didn't appeal to me. Yours did—your new picture of yourself, I mean. I'm going to try to be like that the rest of my life."

They were lingering over cigars and coffee now.

"What is a gentleman?" Barry asked.

Jack smiled.

"The fellow who gets the right portrait."

"I suppose so," Barry said. "Family and clothes didn't make you one—not when you were getting drunk and forging checks. I wasn't one when I took another man's name, and money, and made up to a girl who thought I was somebody else. . . . Pictures over mantel-pieces. That's another word for tradition, I guess. The tradition that makes men defend women, and go down on sinking ships, and all that sort of thing. When that stops being our picture of ourselves, 'God help all of us,' I told Pat once . . . Come on; let's go to a movie!"

CHAPTER XII

The next afternoon—around three o'clock—Harwood phoned.

"The old man wants to see you. Here at his office. I'd come quick if I were you."

So Jack had told him.

Or Evans.

"I'd be glad if you'd tell Willetts, and the rest," Barry had said to the chauffeur. "It'll save me introducing the subject." It would, too. He had dreaded his first few moments with Ridder—beginning his story with a pair of cold, calm eyes boring into him. They would be cold eyes; he felt sure of that.

And they were.

"The big chief" sat at his big desk in a big, richly-furnished office with a big door and a little one. The big double door opened into the reception room. Barry entered through that, and found himself facing Ridder and the smaller single door behind him.

Ridder was reading a radiogram, and he went on reading. A tall, thin man, with New England written all over him. A youngish man for his age, which might have been fifty. He wore gold-rimmed spectacles. His long, thin, absolutely straight mouth was higher at the right end, and his right eye was longer and narrower than his left. He had a sharp chin, and a thin nose, and a broad forehead, with thin, graying, sandyish hair. The kind of man who could say "Good morning" as though that ended the discussion.

"All right," Barry repeated to himself. "I'll take my medicine. It'll soon be over, anyway. He isn't going to give a damn what I did for his son. If I can say anything to make it easier for those two youngsters and Jacky—Wonder what's back of that little door."

He was still wondering when the big chief looked up.

"You're Gilbert?"

"Yes, sir."

"Alias Ridder, eh?"

"Yes, sir."

They were cold eyes. Very cold.

Mostly to end the silence, Barry said, "I suppose your son told you."

"Nobody told me. I've known all about you for two months."

"You've known—"

"I heard my wife's talk with my son the day before we sailed. Through the door to my bedroom. I heard her invite him to Southampton. Next morning, I arranged with Willetts to give me a full report of his doings there."

"And—?"

Barry was thinking in monosyllables.

"And, in his first letter, he mentioned your red hair."

Barry grinned.

"He also mentioned your taking a hundred dollar bill out of an envelope addressed to Mrs. Ridder."

The grin faded.

"You haven't made a move that I haven't known about."

He waited.

"Why didn't you have me arrested?"

"Because I knew that my son was in prison, accused of this murder. I read about that less than an hour after I'd satisfied myself that you weren't my son. Jay Rogers. I'd had a man following him all about Florida. The man's report agreed perfectly with the newspaper account of Jay Rogers."

"Still—"

"What was I to do? Sail? The doctor said that was out of the question. I wired Harwood 'Rogers didn't kill Kelly. Find out who did.' Twenty-four hours later, I knew you were on the Globe, and why, and that you'd succeeded in interesting Winslow."

Our Early Windows

Our windows originally were divided into small panes, because only small panes could be made economically. Glass was blown like toy balloons, and, naturally, only small areas could be cut from these glass globes to fit in a flat frame. When the art of glassmaking made large panes possible the tendency was to clear our windows of all cross pieces and have large unobstructed surfaces.

Source of Olive Oil

Olive oil comes, as its name implies, from the olive, the fruit of small tree which grows in southern Europe. In its unripe state, the olive is eaten between the courses of a dinner. When ripe, it yields olive oil, which has many uses—both internal and external. It is even used as a substitute for butter in some countries bordering on the Mediterranean.

Household Questions

Grease the measuring cup before measuring sirup or molasses and the ingredients will not stick to the sides of the cup and there will be no waste.

• • •

Always sweep rugs and carpets the way of the grain. Brushing against the grain roughens the surface and it tends to brush the dust in instead of out.

• • •

Partly cook cereal in a double boiler the night before using and leave it on the back of the stove, being sure to cover well with water. It will be well cooked in the morning.

• • •

Sugar sprinkled over the tops of cookies or sponge cakes before putting them into the oven forms a sweet crust and makes a richer cookie.

• • •

Cloths saturated with polishing liquids and stored away in closets often cause fires through spontaneous combustion. Store the cloths in covered tin or galvanized cans.

• • •

If you wish to avoid bean rust, do not pick beans when the dew is on them or after rain.

• • •

Glass stoppers may be easily removed from bottles if a towel is dipped into boiling water and wrapped around the neck of bottle for a few minutes.

Wash lettuce and place in refrigerator to get very cold before using in making salads. Crisp lettuce makes the best salad.

Smiles

Modern Miss

The bright young thing came down to breakfast very late.

"Good-morning, daddy," she said gaily. "How much are you going to give me for my trousseau?"

Father looked up from his paper.

"Trousseau?" he snorted. "But I didn't even know you were engaged."

"Goodness," replied the modern daughter, "don't you ever read the papers?"

COUNCIL MEETS MONDAY EVENING

Consider Large Number Of Communications and Receive Reports Of Officials.

A motion appointing B. C. Ross as deputy tax collector was passed by a unanimous vote of the Council.

Fred Linser, representing the V. F. W. of Daly City, addressed the Council asking permission to conduct a one ring circus for a period of four days, assuring the council it is the intention to put on a high class show to derive financial gain for the benefit of his organization. Matter was taken under advisement.

A motion compensating Mr. J. W. Coleberd for services rendered Daly City as acting city attorney for 15 days was passed by a unanimous vote of the Council.

Resolution No. 558, being a resolution relative to the Department of Public Works of the State of California and submitting a memorandum of agreement for the expenditure of the one-quarter (1/4) cent Gas Tax on state highways, was read, and unanimously adopted.

Ordinance No. 208, being an ordinance regulating the keeping of dogs, cats, hares, rabbts, guinea pigs, chickens, turkeys, geese, ducks, doves, pigeons, parrots and game birds, and repealing Ordinance No. 126 of the City of Daly City, was read, passed, and adopted by unanimous vote.

After allowing current expense bills, the council adjourned to meet again in regular session Monday evening, August 10.

Coleberd Cites Background Of Judge Aylett R. Cotton

Judge Aylett R. Cotton, candidate to succeed himself as superior judge of San Mateo County at the August 25 election, has the enthusiastic support of John W. Coleberd, city attorney of South San Francisco, prominent member of the county bar and widely known civic leader, according to an announcement by Coleberd.

"Judge Cotton and I, and our families have been friends for many, many years," Coleberd said. "It was my pleasure to know his father and brothers, all of whom have been honored with positions on the bench. Judge Cotton comes naturally by his ability for the bench, for through his family judical qualifications have been manifest for years.

"As one who has known the judge probably longer than most people of this county, and as one experienced with the law and in dealing with the courts, I want to add my tribute to the many already paid him. We attorneys know him to be of the highest integrity, patient, kindly, fair and humane, with keen understanding of the problems brought into his court. I strongly urge the people of this county to retain him as their judge, which I believe they will do impressively."

NO CAUSE FOR PANIC

The peculiar beating noise that occurs when a car with a different number of cylinders than your own passes you on a hill should not cause you any alarm.

It simply is produced by the variation in the speed, firing and vibration of the two engines and reflects on neither.

TWO GRANDSONS PLUS GRANDAD

The old saying "Two heads are better than one" is a proven true adage. W. E. Pitschke is finding out these days that three heads are even more desirable, for he is experiencing the time his life with two grandsons, Fred and Herbert, aged ten and seven, respectively. They are sons of W. A. Pitschke, resident of the far distant Prairie state of Illinois.

The boys were accompanied by their mother, who is palling around with Mrs. W. E., while the boys are finding keen enjoyment just being together.

Grandpa and grandma are so happily occupied these days that the moments are passing all two quickly.

Mother and the boys will visit various places of interest in the West before returning to their Rockford home and Dad.
